Facebook Giveaway Winner Uses RedEye Remote for iPhone, iPod touch and iPad to Control Her New HD Home Theater

Win an Apple iPad from ThinkFlood by referring RedEye remote to a friend

Waltham, MA – February 18, 2010 — Compulsive doromaniacs and ThinkFlood (<http://thinkflood.com/>) co-founders Matt Eagar and Adam Shapiro love to give away items that can be used or controlled with their company's flagship product, the RedEye universal remote control system for iPhone, iPod touch, and iPad (<http://redeyemote.com/>).

ThinkFlood today announced that Kammy Markey of Lexington, Kentucky is the proud winner of a complete home theater. Kammy entered the giveaway by becoming a fan of RedEye on Facebook.

Days before learning she was the winner of the RedEye Fan Jolt sweepstakes, Kammy Markey and her husband were trying to watch a movie on their old, 27" TV, and the speakers kept failing.

Now Ms. Markey and family are using their new RedEye system and 64 GB iPod touch to control all the other equipment they won: a Sony Bravia 52" 1080p LCD TV, Pioneer 7.2 digital A/V receiver, Paradigm 5.1 surround speakers, LG Blu-ray player with Wi-Fi, and TiVo HD XL DVR.

"The RedEye remote is totally cool," said ThinkFlood giveaway winner Kammy Markey. "When my kids have friends over, they love to show off by using the iPod touch instead of a remote control."

With its latest giveaway, the RedEye Remote Refer-a-Friend sweepstakes, ThinkFlood is celebrating RedEye compatibility with the Apple iPad. ThinkFlood is prepared to give away dozens of Apple tablets; enter before March 31 for a chance to win (odds 1/100): <https://thinkflood.com/products/redeye/redeye-refer-a-friend-ipad-sweeps/>.
